Abbitt Objects To Crop Funding

WASHINGTON –Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va.) told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee last week that the United States should avoid participation in funding overseas programs carried out by international organizations to encourage production of agricultural crops which are in surplus in this country.

The Virginia Congressman, Chairman of the Tobacco Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee, testified before the Agricultural Exports Subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee in hearings to consider problems faced by American exporters.

Abbitt expressed concern over problems which the American tobacco industry has encountered in connection with competition from several African nations which have been financially assisted by the World Bank. The Congressman said, "It has become obvious that because of activities of certain international organizations, including the World Bank, we are facing a competitive situation unlike any which we have confronted heretofore. The difficulty with the current problem is that because of America's participation in some of these international organizations funds of American taxpayers are being used overseas to develop competition with American-grown tobacco."

Abbitt recount-ed efforts which he made last year to block loans by the World Bank to Uganda and Tanzania which have been developing increased production of tobacco. He pointed out that trade missions of several other international-ized organizations have been making overtures to several other nations and urged the subcommittee to "carefully assess any participation in the activities of international organizations which have the effect of undermining exports of American agricultural products."

The Congress man said that such trade missions accomplish some good purposes by stimulating the economies of underveloped nations.

SNOWSTORM BRINGS TRAVELER CHECKING FAMILY TREE

Mrs. Sam L. Hansard of Concord, Tennessee, stopped in Appomattox Thursday afternoon, Feb. 17, and stayed overnight fon. two or three good reasons. The most pressing one was the driving snow which all but obliterated a view of Route 460.

Mrs. Hansard, wife of a professor in the Dept. of Husbandry University of Tennessee, is checking on the records of two Hansard brothers who lived in this vicinity in the late 1700's.

One was John Hansard who married Carolyn Rucker, daughter of Ambrose Rucker, about 1793. The other brother was William Hansard who married Martha Christian, William Hansard served in the Revolutionary War.

The Hansards have been in touch with John Hansard, a gentleman in his 70's, who lives in England and who has visited them in this country. The surname "Hansard", an uncommon name here, is used as a common noun in England to designate records kept in Parliament of procedures of that body. Records are called "hansards", no doubt, says Mrs. Hansard because a man of that name prepared and took care of the records.

If a reader has information helpful to Mrs. Hansard's search for early family records, he can write to this address: Mrs. Sam L. Hansard, 320 Sevenoaks Drive, Concord, Tennessee, 37720.
